Basis

Asia-first AI Operators for marketing. On-brand campaigns for the channels and calendars your markets actually use.

— THE PROBLEM

Generic AI helps demos. It breaks marketing ops.

GENERIC AI

Paste brand guidelines into every chat

One assistant for every channel

English first, localize later

Context disappears between sessions

BASIS

Brand settings load once, everywhere

Specialist Operators per channel

Asia-first briefs from draft one

Persistent threads that compound

— WHAT BASIS IS

Marketing Operators that write in your voice

A platform you run yourself — and a consultancy that designs the operating system around it.

01

Operators

Specialists for ads, email, social, SEO, and campaigns — each with its own history.

02

Brand context

Tone, audience, and avoid lists lock once and travel with every draft.

03

Asia-first

Built for WeChat, LINE, KakaoTalk, festivals, and multi-market calendars — not a localization pass.

Set brand once. Brief in chat. Ship.

01

Choose the job

Spin up an Operator for a launch, cadence, or high-stakes brief.

02

Brief plainly

Goal, offer, constraints — like briefing a teammate.

03

Ship the draft

Refine in thread. History stays for the next sprint.

Built for how media actually works across Asia

Not Instagram-plus-Google as the whole map — then a localization pass.

01

Where media lives

WeChat, LINE, KakaoTalk, and chat commerce sit beside open web and Meta/Google.

02

How demand happens

Live commerce and KOLs drive more of the funnel than ads alone.

03

Campaign calendars

11.11, CNY, and regional peaks set the planning cycle.

On brand by default. Not by luck.

Avoid lists

Banned words, claims, and competitors are enforced on every draft — no stray off-brand lines.

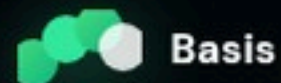

Localized, not translated

Copy is written natively per market, so voice holds from HK to Tokyo to Jakarta.

You stay in control

Review and refine in chat before anything ships. History stays with the conversation.
